Is Miami, with its Spanish-speaking neighbourhoods, its trendy Deco beach scene, its heat, dust and drag queens, truly a part of America - or is it more like Mars? Is it simply the home of vice, violence and Mickey Mouse - Paradise with a lobotomy - or might it be a spiritual place? Alexander Stuart left Brighton for Miami six years ago to rebuild his life following the death of his son. What he found when he got there was a land of transformation: a place where people come to re-invent their lives, to escape from the past or themselves, or even reality.

Stuart's witty and perceptive book explores the eccentric extremes of Florida and through his skewed, off-beat portrait paints a mesmerising picture of where the world may be headed.
